amandacomms @SandyLindsay @PaulCTayla you can't split public and private sector if you are going to move to charges – has to be the same #commschat -8:22 PM Jun 6th, 2011

TippettPR @CommsChat can anyone join? #commschat -8:22 PM Jun 6th, 2011

annatclock The #commschat v. Interesting. On pitching I think agencies need to delve deeper to uncover insights, pitch process often 1 dimensional -8:22 PM Jun 6th, 2011

SandyLindsay @PaulCTayla why distinguish between public and private sector in that case?? #commschat -8:21 PM Jun 6th, 2011

PaulCTayla @SandyLindsay I totally agree, having spent most of my career agency side you do accept it. Just think there may be another way. #commschat -8:21 PM Jun 6th, 2011

SandyLindsay The only time I think clients should pay is if they go through a process and appoint no-one, but that's even less likely! #commschat -8:20 PM Jun 6th, 2011

CommsChat Very intriguing RT @PaulCTayla: Pitching is time consuming. work out a leaner selection model, or pay for time. #commschat -8:20 PM Jun 6th, 2011

PaulCTayla Pitching is time consuming. work out a leaner selection model, or pay for time. To clarify, I'm only talking private sector. #commschat -8:19 PM Jun 6th, 2011

HelenMoore @neilcomm @PaulCTayla Pitching is a tremendously wasteful process most of the time #commschat -8:19 PM Jun 6th, 2011

SandyLindsay @PaulCTayla In an ideal world yes, but how would you price it? We just take the view, if we want the biz we go for it #commschat -8:18 PM Jun 6th, 2011

Communicatomag @PaulCTayla as does various agency bodies. certainly the the DBA. Not too sure where the CIPR sits on this one. #commschat -8:18 PM Jun 6th, 2011

HelenMoore @neilcomm @PaulCTayla I think if they paid, then they would produce a better brief and do more initial research #commschat -8:18 PM Jun 6th, 2011 neilcomm Controversial! RT @PaulCTayla: In terms of 'pitching' (in priv sector) I've often thought companies should pay agencies to pitch. #commschat -8:16 PM Jun 6th, 2011

HelenMoore @PaulCTayla agree, and that would stop a lot of pointless pitching – companies just going through the motions #commschat -8:16 PM Jun 6th, 2011

SandyLindsay @CommsChat one where each party works together towards clear, mutually agreed aims – it's OUR campaign; how are WE doing? #commschat -8:16 PM Jun 6th, 2011

PaulCTayla In terms of 'pitching' (in the private sector) I've often thought companies should pay agencies to pitch. #commschat -8:15 PM Jun 6th, 2011

CommsChat @SandyLindsay What would you hold up as an example of a really good relationship between a client and an agency? #commschat -8:14 PM Jun 6th, 2011

sarahhalton RT @SandyLindsay: A good pitch process involves face to face, open and honest discussions – the more frank the better #commschat -8:14 PM Jun 6th, 2011

SandyLindsay @THRmusicpromos could you give me an example? Not sure why they would be secretive? #commschat -8:14 PM Jun 6th, 2011

SandyLindsay @CommsChat I think the whole client/agency relationship is mutual – if it's not it isn't working #commschat -8:13 PM Jun 6th, 2011
